Our Customer Experience Strategy

Turning to technology or organization structure to create solutions and wins for our customer partners is the benchmark for our customer experience efforts. But like all things in life, there's never a single silver bullet. There are still plenty of hiccups caused by people and processes that aren't singing from the same song.

We understand that breaking down customer experience silos is not easy. For example, Marketing and Sales alignment seems like a natural, but there are different times that horizons in play for these two groups, along with differing skill sets and deliverables that are not always perceived by the other party to be well appreciated or supported. We are trying to change that! Whether you are connecting and managing your account through an account manager or our customer experience team, you will get the same message, We are striving every day to be one team with one voice while we live out People. Food. Together. knowing we are all on the same team with one goal in mind... taking care of you!

Our answer.. Rally the Fam!

We believe the rallying point for breaking down silos is centered around communication, responsiveness, and culture. We believe this magic potion provides common ground, shared vision, and a unifying force!
